Dear Fellow Professional :

Please consider this special invitation to attend our regular monthly meeting on Thursday, January 21, 2016 from 6:00 to 8:00 PM.

In 2004, Michael Slack joined the National Capital Region Cyber Protection Center, a part of the Army Reserve Cyber Operations Group, to serve as a subject matter expert for information security and computer network defense. Over the past eleven years he has served in many capacities in the defense of our nation's information infrastructure. Currently in charge of Cyber Protection Team 183, Lieutenant Colonel Slack has previously served on active duty as a cyber operations planner for the Joint Functional Component Command - Network Warfare, and as the director of operations for all US Army cyber security throughout Southwest Asia.

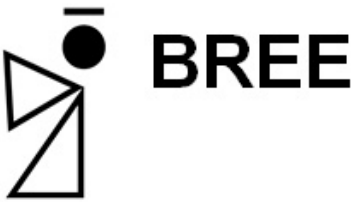

Michael will speak about general trends in information security, as well as certain threats that exist in the environment, today. He will touch on matters that apply to our home lives, and will also talk of matters that affect our civil infrastructure in relation
